Raging Tads are making the nights hideous with the sounds of oyster-cans coming in violent contact with doors, etc. We would suggest that the Oyster Brigade would be a more appropriate name.

The Town Hall is beginning to take some shape. The workmen are at work on the second story.

This place, all faith in the Narrows railway, is fast building up. Mr. A. M. Southward is building two stories for a drug store and dry goods store; Mr. James Murray is building a room for a furniture store, and several private houses are being built.

Epizootic is showing itself here very plainly. Cases at a lively rate.

AVONDALE.—There will be an adjourned meeting of Council to-night.

Route No. 13, like the epizootic, is upon us, and its presence is duly appreciated.

The remodeling of the Presbyterian Church will cost ten thousand dollars. The musical vocal music furnished by the animals in the Zoological Garden has awakened a new interest in the sentiment of the song, "Home, Sweet Home."

An Avondale gentleman, who was detained in the city very late on the night preceding the election, hired a hack and proceeded to his house, which he reached at 8 o'clock. A. M. to inform his wife that he wouldn't be home that night. His good wife, on receiving the message in person, blandly remarked, "I knew you wouldn't be home, and therefore went to bed, and now you've come and awakened me out of a sound sleep to tell me what I knew before." This remark caused reflection.

HAMILTON.—The County Commissioners held a session Saturday. Bills to the amount of $1,492.46 were passed.

A little son of William Stevens was Saturday thrown from his father's wagon and considerably bruised.

Miss Paulina Straub and her sister, Mrs. Weiler, will give a concert and dramatic reading in Middletown to-morrow evening under the auspices of the Quixotic Club.

There was a good attendance at the Teachers' Association Saturday.

Two new cases of varioloid were yesterday reported to the Health Officer. Both cases are in the first ward.

The excitement in regard to the spread of the small-pox seems to be on the increase, especially on the west side of the river.

Saturday afternoon a match game of base-ball was played between a picked nine and the Marias nine, which resulted in the defeat of the latter by a score of one to two.

The rumor in circulation Saturday that Mrs. Rhea, widow of Henry Rhea, had died of small-pox, is without foundation. Her disease is varioloid in a very mild form, from which she is rapidly recovering.

Two haunted houses are reported to exist on the spirits within them in this city. This subject would be an appropriate one for the consideration of Col. Sandusky's Psycho-Philosophic Society.

Red J. W. Fitch and Elder J. C. Walden are holding another debate on dogmatic theology at Versailles. Dr. Snodgrass, of this city, could explain all questions on this subject in as many hours as it takes days for these country gentlemen to do the same brain work.

NEWPORT, KY.—Last Friday night, between the hours of seven and ten, some daring burglar entered the residence of Mr. William Magill, on Fairfield avenue, Bellevue, and ransacked the house, neither being deterred by anything else escaping their vigilant search. They not being able to find much money, took all the silverware they could get, together with a quantity of clothing and a number of old gold and silver coins. Mrs. Magill had been on a visit to a sister friend, and she is Treasurer of the Sisters of Rebecca lodge, and was known to have several hundred dollars of lodge money in her care, it is supposed it was the money that was wanted. Mr. Magill, not thinking it safe to keep the money in his house, a few days ago deposited it in the safe in his place of business in Cincinnati. On Friday night he was in Newport, on business, and went home about 10 P. M. to find things as stated. No clue to the thieves has yet been obtained.

Wm. Hanks, aged about twenty-two years, residing with his parents on Sanford street, was last Saturday night arrested on an affidavit sworn out by a man named Powell, charging him with committing a rape upon the person of Powell's daughter Katie, a little girl only fourteen years of age. She claims that Hanks, on Friday night, took her to Cincinnati, and after numerous attempts to get her to drink beer with him, asked her to go to the house or room of a friend. Child like, she went with him. He took her to a house where the girl says he was smilingly received by the owner, who was quite well acquainted with him. They were shown to an apartment where they were left alone. They had no sooner entered than Hanks made forcible attempts to take liberties with her. She screamed for help but no help came, and not until he had accomplished his heinous purpose did he release her. He then brought her home to her parents, residing on Second street, near Scott. On Saturday afternoon she became very ill and made known the whole affair. Near evening it was found necessary to call on Drs. Severs and Rutherford, and her condition at present is critical. Hanks was arrested and appeared before E. Quigley, Judge of Probate, this morning, and was taken in charge by an officer, who conveyed him to Cincinnati, where the offense was committed and he must be tried. The mother of the girl is today a raving maniac, and had to be locked in a room.

The Covington staff of the morning luminaries seem to be very much affected by an attack of bad whiskey. In this case whiskey is stronger than fiction.

In the Mayor's Court this morning, Wm. Hawley and John Donnelly were fined $1 and cost each, for being drunk. Several other unimportant cases were disposed of.

Will Hanks, after being taken to Cincinnati, waived an examination and was bound over to the next term of the Criminal Court.

LOCAL NEWS.

Notes to the Police Court.

Promptly at 8:30 this morning the doors of the Lindeman Varieties were thrown open, and the seats were soon filled up as madly a crowd as ever was seen. There were the Backtown beauties, sandwiched between police officers and curiosity seekers, and street boys in the foreground. Respectably and even fashionably dressed females were present as prosecuting witnesses, sharing the benches with the most abandoned of either sex, who had been drawn there by a fascination which they could not resist. (Many of them had themselves been some time drawn from there in the Black Maria, small boys who had better be at school were there; mothers with babies in arms, and eyes glued on the dignified but kindly face of the Judge, sat there in a row; half-dressed and ragged-looking men of all sorts of dress, from the flashy habiliments of the res. club to the shabby rags of the coarse gamblers, the morning. In fact, all ages, nationalities, conditions and both sexes, were here represented, and all apparently interested in this comedy of "Life among the Lowly."

Among the distinguished artists that played their brief part came a depraved specimen of female humanity named Annie Cooper, aged about 43, who was charged with the murder of a street boy, "Annie," said his Honor, "you have been here too often; you are a heavy woman and have no cause to beg; I'll send you up for a short term this time, and you must keep away from here. Make it five days; now go and be before!"

Next J. C. Hogan walked in, guided to the courtroom by Officer Harahan. "Pat," says Prosecutor Callahan, "you are charged with being drunk and disorderly. What have you got to say to that?" Pat, by the way, looked as though he had lain down last Saturday, telling some kind friend to place a nail down between his legs, and had dropped in to see the morning. In fact, he pleaded guilty, and went out the road by his Honor's orders, 30 days.

With measured step and slow up comes a young German named A. Plund. He has no money, and desires to go to the Work-house until funds shall reach him from his friends in "Fatherland."

"Let him go for thirty days."

"Next," says the Judge, "Mollie Cook, step this way. Mollie, you were arrested last night at the corner of George and Elm for disorderly conduct. How is that?" "Yes," chipped in the arresting officer, "she made hideous in the Station-house."

Said the Judge: "Well, Mollie, how often have you been here before?" "Said Mollie, "I don't know how often, sir, but it's been a month since I was here last."

"What have you got to say to this last charge, Mollie?" "I'm guilty, Judge, and might as well say so. But on your Honor, don't send me to the Work-house; I'm trying to do the best I can to get some clothes. Please, sir, don't send me out and I'll do better."

Again the arresting officer spoke up: "She has often made fair promises, but she's getting worse all the time."

"Mollie, this is very bad. You'll go to the Work-house for ten days."

And the fair damsel turned away with a weary smile of resignation.

"John Clark, you are here for sleeping in a vestibule on Third street. Have you no home? Where do you belong?" "I live in Lancaster, O., Judge, and if you let me off, sir, I'll go home on the first train."

"Very well, you are dismissed; now light out for the depot."

He strode out of that court room as if he'd been invited to a free lunch.

George Hughes, a cobbler, from Cleveland— "Wants to go to the Hotel de Morgan. Send him out for three months."

Fanny Baker, a shriveled up old hag, with marks of disfigurement in every wrinkle of her ugly old mug, stepped to the sweat-box. "Fanny, I'll send you to the Work-house."

"Fanny, I'll send you to the Work-house, sir, but I'm not a sportin' woman. I sometimes drink a little, and was drunk last night, but I don't do it regular."

"Yes, but you'll pay $5 and costs for this little spree."

And so it went. Dozens and dozens of similar cases were ground out, but this is enough to show that the "Varieties" will deserve the splendid patronage that is bestowed.
